M. E. CAMERON, R.N.

A HANDBOOK OF OBSTETRICAL NURSING. For Students, Nurses, and Mothers. Comprising the Course of Instruction in Obstetrical Nursing Given to Pupils of the Training School for Nurses Connected with the Woman's Hospital of Philadelphia. By Anna M. Fullerton, M.D., Formerly Obstetrician, Gynæcologist, and Surgeon to the Woman's Hospital of Philadelphia; Physician-in-charge and Superintendent of its Nurse Training School; and Clinical Professor of Gynæcology in the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania; late Lecturer on Surgery and Operative Midwifery in the North India School of Medicine for Women. Seventh Edition. Price, $1. P. Blakiston's Sons, Philadelphia.

Although Dr. Fullerton seems to have withdrawn from work in this country in favor of India, her work here is kept up to date and the present edition, which appears under the revision of Catherine MacFarlane, is in every respect as complete and satisfactory as the book has always been. Having been reviewed in these pages more than once, there needs only to note the new edition.

HOME HYGIENE AND THE PREVENTION OF DISEASE. By Norman E. Ditman, M.D. Price, $1.50 net. Duffield and Company, New York.

The author, in a rather lengthy introduction, declares himself to be in favor of that class who work for preventive measures quite as much as for curative. He believes, too, that the quickest way to get rid of the doctor is to call him often and early. "One justification of a popular work of this kind," he says, "is that not only can its readers render the best aid to the incipient or slight invalid, but they should be enabled to better appreciate when an ailment has become serious enough to require expert medical attendance, or when a disease is, from the outset, beyond the aid of unskilled hands." Further he says: "There are few, in our modern era of civilization, who do not understand the workings and failings of automobiles, engines, phonographs, sewing-machines and household appliances. It would seem the part of discretion, therefore, if we knew at least as much about a few of the com-
